§ 3 of the Constitution

There are three types of members as follows:

1. National homœpathic organizations and institutions („institutional members").
2. Physical persons that are physicians, veterinary surgeons and dentists with a full medical, veterinarian or dental qualification of a State University or any other licensing authority duly recognised by the government of the country, in which they practise and who have had special education in homeopathy and hold any kind of diploma recognised by the association („individual members").
3. All persons with qualifications recognised nationally, who have undertaken homeopathic training recognised by the LMHI, such as pharmacists, medical students, chemists and all persons, who are licensed health care providers, such as naturopaths, nurse practitioners, physician's assistants and generally persons who by their profession can contribute to homœpathy, such as scientists, researchers, authors may become associate members of the association („associate members"). Admission to membership is decided by a two-third majority of the International Council.

§ 4 of the Constitution

All members pay annual fees. The annual fees for each type of member are fixed by the International Council. The association is liable for its obligations only through its capial. A personal liability of the members is excluded. Members that do not effect the payment of the annual fee may be removed from the association by decision of a simple majority of the Executive Committee.

§ 2 of the Procedures

Any person who wishes to become an Individual member must apply in writing to the General Secretary through the National Vice-President of his country or nation. He must complete the forms prepared by the General Secretary and must be sponsored by two Individual members from this country or nation. The National Vice-President must forward the application to the General Secretary within one month.

Persons who are members of an LMHI Institutional member are exempted from the procedure as per section 1 above.
